I remember when I was little, I struggled with constipation pretty badly. My mom would hold my hand while I sat on the toilet for what seemed like hours.... she would hug me as I cried. TMI for most of you but this is just an example of her love showing no limits. I miss her big bear hugs and our secret runs to tj max - when we would come home and hide all of the bags from my step dad. Haha... I miss everything about her from her home cooked meals to her sneaking us candy at Laurens softball games. She was warm place. I love her more than I can express. She was the one I would run to after break ups, she would rock me after bad dreams, and give me a bath in the middle of the night when I wet the bed. I am so thankful for my sisters because she lives on within us. She would do almost anything to make us happy - she showed us what real unconditional love was. When I wrecked her car when driving carelessly in the rain the only question she had when I called her freaking out was, "Are you okay?" She met me in the early hours of the morning to hold me and see for herself that I was okay. She was the hardest working person I knew. I wish she could have stuck around a little bit longer to see some of the fruits of her labor. I could go on and on... love you more than anyone in the whole world, Mom.

Chris and I were close in our school years. I remember her fondly. We had some fun times. She had a great smile and so pretty. May the memories of her help get the family through this time of grieving. God Bless you all.
